

Momentum 2016

NATIONAL CASA ASSOCIATION
ANNUAL REPORT

It takes a movement to move lives forward.

This year, Court Appointed Special Advocate (CASA) and guardian ad litem (GAL) volunteers spoke up for more children than ever before, helping them find permanency in safe, loving homes. Our work to bring volunteers, partners, donors and leaders together in collaboration to advocate for the most vulnerable children continues to gather strength and move forward.

Now more than ever, it takes a movement of committed individuals, across the country, to speak up for every child who's been abused or neglected—and is at risk of getting lost in the system.

Our movement is growing in strength with more volunteers.

Our movement is growing in influence and scope as our member programs expand their service to children in new counties and cities across the country.

Our movement is growing in impact and lives changed as we reach more new children.

Dear Friends,

Our mission is to ensure every child who has experienced abuse or neglect has a caring, consistent adult to advocate for his or her well-being. This bold promise to give every one of America's most vulnerable children a voice requires the passion, dedication and collaboration of a network of 938 CASA/GAL programs, community volunteers, government and judicial partners and our dedicated donors and philanthropic supporters.

We are pleased to report that 2016 marked an exceptional year for the National CASA Association and the entire CASA/GAL network. Through high-performing collaborations taking place in 49 states, nearly 87,000 volunteers served more than 280,000 children—that is a 13 percent increase in volunteers and a 12 percent jump in children served over the prior year.

Even as we celebrate the great strides we made in 2016 and the new children we served, we still have more work to do. Over the last five years, the number of children in foster care has risen 8 percent, a rise that public health officials, analyzing other data trends, increasingly attribute to the growing use of opioids. Sadly, we expect this number to continue to climb.

Meeting these growing needs requires momentum. We know the key to continued progress is adding more advocates who can help expand our service to children. That means recruiting new volunteers to serve more children, leaders who can provide strong governance to our member programs across the country and supporters who can advocate for policies that meet the needs of the children we serve.

National CASA is at the helm of this nationwide effort to recruit more advocates. In these pages you will see snapshots of our progress through the lens of the people who truly fuel our momentum to serve more children. These stories of our highly trained volunteer advocates, our dedicated and new donors and local program volunteers going the distance to contribute their voice, time and talents are truly inspiring.

We are also pleased to share with you a number of initiatives that served as catalysts for the exciting increase in children served and laid the groundwork for CASA/GAL program expansion. These include our work to strengthen the capacity of programs in key states, our focus on bringing our advocacy to new levels of effectiveness with our performance measurement initiative and the progress we made this past year to update our volunteer training curriculum.

Both of us consider it an honor to provide leadership to National CASA and serve the CASA/GAL network. We are very grateful for the role you play in moving more than a quarter-million young lives forward. We could not do this incredibly important work without the generous support of our donors and partners.

National CASA needs your support, collaboration and engagement in our mission more than ever as we build on 2016's momentum with continued drive, dedication and purpose.

GROWING STRONGER IN ALABAMA

In 2016, National CASA supported the Alabama CASA Network with grants totaling $135,000 to bring new strength and impact to the state organization. Important steps forward included opening CASA of Northeast Alabama in January 2016 to serve DeKalb County, implementing a statewide database to capture real-time outcomes of children served and increasing the number of children served by 11.4 percent since 2015.

Alabama also created a “roadshow” to take the CASA story across the state to help recruit volunteers, engage donors and build general knowledge and support of CASA programs and services. In 2016, Alabama CASA was able to secure more than $900,000 in state and private funding.

MAKING STRIDES IN KENTUCKY

With the highest rate of child homelessness in the country and an opioid epidemic wreaking havoc, Kentucky has a state organization with a mandate to grow. Thanks in part to $72,000 in grant funding from National CASA, the Kentucky CASA Network transformed its board, adding seven new members.

It also developed a best practices handbook for programs in the state, created two new CASA programs and laid the groundwork for five more and saw its state and federal grant funding grow by 400 percent.

The Kentucky CASA Network also added new staff members to provide support to local programs and bolstered statewide volunteer recruitment efforts with in-kind marketing support.

Growth Through Collaboration

Child welfare systems operate differently in every state, and CASA/GAL advocacy also varies, depending on state laws and trends. Because of this variance, National CASA's 900 local member programs require tailored support from state CASA/GAL organizations whose leaders know the operating environment and can give on-the-ground support. National CASA is committed to building highly effective state CASA/GAL organizations in all 50 states, so every local program serving children can receive highly tailored assistance and support.

Working in partnership with our newly established State Leadership Council, National CASA defined the characteristics of a highly effective state organization. Using those criteria, we identified 17 states with the greatest opportunity to strengthen their existing state CASA/GAL organization or start a new one, and we launched our State Development Initiative.

National CASA realigned resources and granted nearly $1 million in funds to work in partnership with these 17 states. In 2016, National CASA helped start new state organizations in Idaho, Montana and Wyoming. With state development grants, we enabled other states, like Alabama and Kentucky, to build their governing boards, develop their infrastructure and position themselves to receive new federal, state and private funds. We supported the state organization in Illinois through a leadership transition and laid the groundwork to open state organizations in Massachusetts and South Dakota.

In addition to grant funds, National CASA offered intensive development assistance, convened peer-to-peer calls among developing state organizations to share ideas and offered customized support in operations, management, governance and marketing. Through an environment of collaboration among National CASA and state-based leadership, our member programs are scaling to address unmet need, bolster volunteer recruitment and retention and increase the number of children served across the country.

A young boy with a bright smile is leaning on a metal railing. He is wearing a green and blue horizontally striped t-shirt and light-colored shorts. The background is a blurred green, suggesting an outdoor setting. A teal diagonal graphic element is in the bottom right corner.

“My CASA volunteer made sure that I had a good place to live and people in my life who loved me.”

A Child's Life Moves Forward

My name is Will. I am 12 years old, and I live in Alabama. I was nine years old when I met my CASA volunteer, Cheryl. My brothers, sisters and I didn't have any place to live before that. When I was in foster care, I moved to 15 different homes in two years. Most of my brothers and sisters were adopted, but not me. My aunt let my twin brother and my sister live with her, but she didn't want me there.

From all of the places I lived, I had Cheryl's business card. When she would visit me, I showed it to her and said, "I still have your card!" I wanted to make sure it was okay that I could still talk to her and that she still wanted to be in my life. She seemed like the only person who cared what happened to me.

Finally, after two really bad years, I moved in with my great aunt, Beth. I have lived with Aunt Beth for a year now. I have a special box where I keep all of my favorite things, and I still keep my CASA volunteer Cheryl's business card in there. I have had it for a long time now, but I don't ever want to get rid of it. Cheryl made sure that I had a good place to live and people in my life who loved me. I don't want to think about where I would be now without her.

Advancing Volunteer Training

In 2016, National CASA made important progress on refreshing the National CASA volunteer training curriculum used to train more than 24,000 new volunteers each year before they ever step into the courtroom. As the needs of children change, we are committed to revising and updating our curriculum to ensure the highest quality advocacy possible.

Our updated curriculum draws on research showing our volunteers can learn and retain more when they apply concepts to real-life scenarios and cases. The revised curriculum will empower and prepare volunteers with the latest research on trauma-informed care and child development.

To ensure the updates would succeed in continuously improving the quality of volunteer best-interest advocacy across the country, National CASA worked with a select number of programs in Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Wyoming to pilot the revised curriculum and provide feedback.

National CASA staff members had the opportunity to pilot the revised curriculum, allowing our longest-serving and newest staff members to work through the cases and simulations that will prepare volunteers to advocate for children in court. National CASA's diverse staff brought unique perspectives to the table. Some have a long history in the field of child welfare and brought critical subject matter expertise. Others had been foster parents or children in foster care themselves. Still others serve as current volunteers with their local CASA/GAL program and had been through a previous version of the training.

Through extensive input and review from a diverse groups of experts and practitioners, National CASA's updated curriculum creates the potential for dramatic influence across courtrooms in the United States and in the lives of America's most vulnerable children.

COLLABORATING ON THE CURRICULUM REFRESH

As a member of the Curriculum Development Committee, Jennifer Valentine, Director of Program Services at CASA for Children of Atlantic and Cape May Counties in New Jersey, had not only a hand in making revisions to the curriculum, but also a firsthand look at the new material in action as the leader of a pilot training site. With her front row seat, Valentine witnessed the potential impact of the updated training curriculum before its national rollout.

“The changes equip volunteers with the latest thinking, knowledge, tools and skills to get results for the children we represent,” says Valentine. By focusing on critically important areas like case-based learning, trauma-informed care and even sharpening volunteer’s court report writing skills, we’re bringing volunteers in line with the very latest research and best practices from clinicians, mental health professionals, social workers and more.

“A critically important element in the updated training is the focus on cultural competency,” says Valentine. “Helping our volunteers understand and advocate for the needs of LGBTQ youth or Native American children, for example, helps the volunteer make recommendations in the child’s unique best interest.”

Measuring Our Impact

To increase the effectiveness of our advocacy on behalf of children, we are continually assessing our activities and interventions. What works best for children in foster care? In the midst of a devastating opioid epidemic and with human trafficking on the rise, what do children in today's society need most under these difficult circumstances? How can we ensure the best outcomes possible?

National CASA is seeking to answer these questions and many more with our new Performance Measurement Initiative, officially launched in 2016.

Children in foster care are less likely to graduate from high school, more likely to be trafficked and will experience higher rates of incarceration and homelessness as they enter adulthood. This important and sweeping initiative will help us identify how National CASA, and its nationwide network, can help children avoid those poor outcomes.

Working with more than a quarter-million children nationwide, National CASA's member network is uniquely qualified to identify which interventions work best for children before the courts or in foster care. We plan to share new evidence-based knowledge from the Performance Measurement Initiative with policymakers, judges and other child welfare professionals who can join us in ensuring better outcomes and brighter futures for America's most vulnerable children.

KAPPA ALPHA THETA FOUNDATION INVESTS IN BETTER OUTCOMES FOR CHILDREN

Speaking up for children who have experienced abuse or neglect has long been a priority for Kappa Alpha Theta. More than a quarter century into its partnership with CASA, Kappa Alpha Theta Foundation was looking to make a significant investment in the child welfare space. When Theta Foundation learned about the opportunity to support National CASA's new Performance Measurement Initiative, its leadership saw an opportunity. In June 2016, Theta Foundation announced a $1 million commitment to the project over three years.

More than just investors in CASA's mission, the women of Kappa Alpha Theta serve as court-appointed volunteers, donors, staff members, board members and champions in communities nationwide. And while local impact continues to be critical, Theta Foundation wanted to scale its footprint. "We saw an opportunity to help children in foster care system-wide, not just in those cities and towns where the Fraternity has members," said Theta Foundation President Mary Ellen Fitzsimonds. "We hope other funders will join us in investing in better outcomes for these kids."

A Donor Who Makes Progress Possible

As a long-term supporter of National CASA, Ron Honeyman is well known around the network, having attended 22 consecutive National CASA/GAL conferences over the years. When asked about his involvement with the CASA movement, he attributes it all to one person: his wife, Joyce.

As a member of Kappa Alpha Theta's board, Joyce was instrumental in creating the partnership with National CASA in 1992, and she drove the family's philanthropic giving that has meant so much to our work. As Ron explained, downplaying his personal involvement during the early years when Joyce was on the National CASA Board of Trustees, he simply "went along to carry her suitcase."

In reality, Ron has always been a steadfast supporter of the CASA/GAL network. Since Joyce passed away in 2014, he has continued to give generously to support our mission and the work of volunteer advocates across the country.

In fact, in 2016 alone, Ron made seven gifts in honor of family members' birthdays and other milestones.

“In 2016 alone, Ron made seven gifts in honor of family members’ birthdays and other milestones.”

A young girl with dark hair in a bun, wearing a blue dress over a pink shirt and pink shoes, is running across a green grassy field. The image is blurred to convey a sense of motion. The text "Our momentum is building, but so is the need." is overlaid on the left side of the image in a white serif font.

Our momentum
is building, but so is the need.

“Now is the time to ensure we have a volunteer to speak with conviction and compassion for every child who has suffered neglect, abuse or abandonment. Join us.”
